Table of content

Preface

Part 1: Introduction

Part 1a: The interface between science and society: Science communication and emergent technologies

1a.1 Science communication as a field of research and practice

1a.2 Delimiting science communication

Part 1b: Making sense of ecogenomics

1b.1 Target publics and emerging technologies and information-seeking behaviors, attitude development and interactivity

1b.2 Central aims and research question

1b.3 Methodology

Part 2: The studies

2.1 Adolescent responses toward a new technology: First associations, information seeking and affective responses toward ecogenomics

2.2 Getting adolescents to inform themselves about ecogenomics: A Dutch case study

2.3 Early exposures to ecogenomics: Effects of priming and website interactivity among adolescents

2.4 Cognitive engagement, societal relevance and direct interactivity when introducing ecogenomics in schools: Perceptions of students, teachers and scientists

2.5 Primary characteristics of interactivity in science communication contexts

Part 3: Conclusions and discussion

3.1 Conclusions

3.2 Discussion

References

Summary

Samenvatting

Nawoord