Contents

Acknowledgements

Part 1 Backgrounds

Chapter 1

Positioning the research within the historical, social and political context

1.1 Introducing the historical, social and political setting

- Zionism and the creation of the state of Israel
- Israel: a militarized society
- The Israeli–Palestinian conflict from 1967 on

1.2 Key concepts

- A-symmetrical conflict
- Situating ‘perpetrators’ and ‘misbehaviour’
- Code of ethics

Chapter 2

Theory, approach and methods

2.1 Theoretical concepts and theoretical frameworks

- Ethics and morality
- Military ethics
- The anthropological contribution to the study of morality
- The anthropology and the sociology of the military
- The contribution of this work

2.2 The approach

- Choices made

2.3 Methodology

- Fieldwork

2.4 Outline of the chapters

Part 2

Working in the Territories and its effects on soldiers

Introduction

Chapter 3

The Work arenas of the Israeli soldier: checkpoints, arrests and patrolling

- Policing by soldiers: dirty work

3.1 Checkpoints: obstruction of passage

- Checkpoints, or are they...
- An ethnography of the checkpoint arena

3.2 Arrests and ‘straw widows’: entering the private Palestinian domain

- Arrests
- ‘Straw widows’
- Entering the private domain

3.3 Patrolling
Chapter 4
The implications of the work in the OPT for the soldiers: emotional, physical and cognitive dimensions

4.1 Anger, boredom, frustration and more: the emotional dimension

4.2 Hot, cold and tired: the physical dimension

4.3 Unclear categories and uncertainty: implications of the cognitive dimension

4.4 Conclusion

Chapter 5
The numbing of the moral competence of soldiers

5.1 Moral professionalism

5.2 Cognitive blurring

5.3 Detachment: ‘not thinking about it’

5.4 Conclusion

Part 3 Morality in discourse

Introduction

Chapter 6
The discursive strategies of soldiers

6.1 Theoretical standpoints on discursive and moral strategies: conscious or unconscious

Bandura’s moral disengagement