Contents

Acknowledgments 7

I Introduction 9
A resurgence of metaphysics 9
Structure of this thesis 9
Ontological framework 10
Methodology 12
An initial objection 13

II Traditional cosmological arguments: two paradigmatic forms 17
Introduction 17
The first paradigmatic form 17
The second paradigmatic form 21
Closing remarks 27

III The cosmological argument of Koons 29
Introduction 29
Background 30
The argument 32
Objections 34
Closing remarks 50

IV The cosmological argument of Gale and Pruss 51
Introduction 51
Background 51
The argument 54
Objections 60
Closing remarks 96

V Cosmological arguments of Rasmussen 97
Introduction 97
The argument from a maximal contingent state of existence 97
Three additional alternative paths to the existence of a concrete necessary being 117
Closing remarks 122
vi Atomism, causalism and the existence of a first cause 123
Introduction 123
Stage setting 124
Parthood and composition 124
The argument 126
In defense of the premises 128
Closing remarks 135

vii A critical assessment of the argument from causalism and atomism 137
Introduction 137
Objections discussed as part of the traditional Thomistic and Leibnizian arguments 137
Objections discussed as part of the arguments of Koons, Gale & Pruss, and Rasmussen 140
Objections specifically addressing the new argument's framework or premises 150

viii Conclusions and further work 163
Introduction 163
An inherent limitation of cosmological arguments 163
Two further, more fundamental, problems 165
The case for theism 171

Samenvatting 193

References 201