TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgements
Chapter 1: Introduction
  1 Democracy
  2 Ontology
  3 Political liberalism, Foucault and psychoanalysis
    3.1 An ontology of democracy
    3.2 The democratic politicization of ontology
  4 Research questions
  5 Overview of chapters

Chapter 2: Politicizing Political Liberalism
  2.1 Introduction
  2.2 The democratic politicization of political philosophy
    2.2.1 The democratic turn
    2.2.2 The reflective equilibrium
  2.3 A ‘freestanding’ justification of justice
    2.3.1 Stability and ontology
    2.3.2 The disorienting and depoliticizing effects of ontology
  2.4 Politicizing political liberalism
    2.4.1 Ontological remnants in the notion of political freedom
    2.4.2 The principle of mutual respect and public reason
  2.5 Conclusion

Chapter 3: The Stimulation of Enlightened Contest
  3.1 Introduction
  3.2 ‘A historical ontology of ourselves’
  3.3 A historical ontology of political philosophy
    3.3.1 Two views on power
    3.3.2 Foucault’s challenge to liberal social contract theory
    3.3.3 Confronting Foucault’s critique with political liberalism
  3.4 Foucault’s ethos of ‘Stimulating Contest’
    3.4.1 Foucault’s ontology of power and bodily forces
TABLE OF CONTENTS

3.4.2 ‘The great carnival of time’: an aesthetic experiment with plurality 109
3.5 The Stimulation of Enlightened Contest 114
   3.5.1 Foucault’s ontology of agonic freedom 116
   3.5.2 Agonic freedom and the Enlightened transfiguration of ancient ethics 118
3.6 Agonic democracy 123
   3.6.1 Agonic exercises and political liberalism 123
   3.6.2 Agonic debates and political liberalism 126
3.7 Conclusion 135

Chapter 4: Agonic Democracy and the Exercise of Rights

4.1 Introduction 139
4.2 The governmentalized state 142
   4.2.1 Governmentality 142
   4.2.2 The state and plurality 146
4.3 A political liberalist approach to state-sanctioned exclusions 149
   4.3.1 Political liberalism and unintended effects 150
   4.3.2 Tomasi’s proposal 152
4.4 The ontological remnants in Tomasi’s social theory 155
   4.4.1 ‘Life as a narrative’: a precondition or site of contest of democratic politics? 158
   4.4.2 MacIntyre’s ontology of tradition 159
   4.4.3 A political liberalist appropriation of MacIntyre’s ontology 163
4.5 Politicizing Tomasi’s concept of legal culture 165
   4.5.1 The displacement of agonic concerns 165
   4.5.2 A case-study: the exclusionary effects of religious freedom in the United States 170
4.6 Conclusion 176

Transit: Renegotiating Political Liberalism and Agonic Democracy 179

Chapter 5: Drained by a Democratic ‘Burn-Out’: the Emotional burdens of Agonic Democracy

5.1 Introduction 185
5.2 A democratic ‘burn-out’ 189
Table of Contents

5.3 A psychoanalytic reading of civic loss 195
   5.3.1 Freud on mourning and omnipotence 196
   5.3.2 Freud’s Oedipus complex and agonic democracy 199
   5.3.3 A historical ontology of the Oedipus complex 204
   5.3.4 Winnicott’s agonic coping strategy in the face of loss 207
   5.3.5 Democratic mourning regimes 214

5.4 Cultivating an appetite for democratic contest 218
   5.4.1 A transitional network 218
   5.4.2 ‘Laughing Saints and Righteous Heroes’: a case-study on two transitional networks 224
   5.4.3 Experimenting with transitional networks: emotional boundary markers 230

5.5 Conclusion 235

Concluding Summary 237

Bibliography 247

Samenvatting 267

Index of Names 277