Table of Contents

Acknowledgements 9

Summary of study 11

Overzicht over de studie 13

Chapter One 15

The limits and possibilities of postmetaphysical God-talk. A conversation between Heidegger, Levinas and Derrida: An introduction

1. Introduction, rationale and delimitation of study 15
2. Problem statement and focus 22
3. Guiding questions 22
4. Method 22
5. Chapter layout 23

Chapter Two 25

The limits and possibilities of Heidegger’s wounded metaphysics and the limits and possibilities it offers to postmetaphysical God-talk

1. Introduction 25

1.1 Why Heidegger? 25
1.2 The limitations of his thought 26
1.3 The possibilities of his thought 27
1.4 Three interrelated thought-paths (Gedankenwege) towards the wounding of Metaphysics 29

2. Verwundung der Metaphysik: the wounding of metaphysics 30

2.1 The meaning of Being 31
2.2 Aletheia or A-letheia (the truth of Being) 42

2.2.1 Introduction 42

2.2.2 A turn (Kehre) on his earlier thinking and the development of the Seinsgeschichte 42
2.2.3 The Myth of the two beginnings 44
2.2.4 Thinking back to the great Anfang and the new Beginning and the possibilities of the truth (aletheia) of Being 46
2.2.5 Machination and lived experience and the truth of Be-ing 53
2.2.6 The Greek origin of machination and the possible other beginning
2.2.7 Aletheia: truth of Being
2.3 Ereignis (the event of Being or disclosure of appropriation)
2.3.1 The translation of Ereignis
2.3.2 Understanding Ereignis
3. Language, the house of Being
4. Limits and possibilities of wounded metaphysical God-talk
4.1 The limitations of the Last God in and as Ereignis
4.2 Possibilities of talking of the Last God

Chapter Three
The limits and possibilities of Levinas’ ‘other otherwise’ and the limits and possibilities it offers to postmetaphysical God-talk
1. Introduction
2. Ethics and towards a language of alterity
2.1 The self and the face of the Other towards ethical metaphysics
2.1.1 The face as the disruption of the totality
2.2 The naked self and the signification of substitution: saying
3. The language of alterity: Transcendence and infinity towards possibilities of God-talk
4. The (im)possibilities of Levinas’ God-talk
4.1 The possibilities of Levinas’ God-talk
4.1.1 God coming-to-idea in the thought of the trace in the face of the Other: illeity
4.1.2 God coming-to-idea in the idea of the Infinite, the Infinite in me
4.1.3 God coming-to-idea in the Good beyond Being
4.2 God-talk
4.2.1 Creation
4.2.2 Election
4.2.3 “Here I am”
4.3 The impossibility of Levinas’ God-talk
4.3.1 (Im)possibility of God-talk as prophetic signification
4.3.2 The (im)possibility of God-talk between illeity and il y a

4.3.3 (Im)possibility of God-talk: language, said and saying

5. The (im)possibility of concluding a chapter on Levinas’ God-talk

5.1 Always already in the world (in language) subjected to old signs to speak and reflect on the subjection of the self-for-the-Other

5.2 Being in the world and the coming to idea of God

Chapter four

The limits and possibilities of Derrida’s différance for postmetaphysical God-talk

1. Impossible yet necessary introduction to Derrida’s thought

2. Speech – sign – writing – context

2.1 Where to begin: a supplemented beginning

2.2 The priority of speech in Western thought

2.3 The impossibility of thinking the sign without writing: speech is already writing

2.4 Le texte en général and autodeconstruction

2.5 Deconstruction

3. Différance and the closure of metaphysics

3.1 Différance

3.2 The closure of metaphysics

4. Heidegger, Levinas and Derrida at the end of philosophy or the closure of metaphysics and a vulnerability toward the tout autre

4.1 Derrida’s interpretation of Heidegger

4.2 Derrida’s interpretation of Levinas

4.2.1 The impossible or the impossible

4.2.2 Tout autre

4.2.3 The advent within language of that which is beyond language

4.2.4 The relationship to the feminine other

5. The limits and impossibilities of Derrida’s God-talk: Derrida’s yes and no to negative theology

5.1 The limits of Derrida’s différance for postmetaphysical God-talk

5.1.1 Différance “is” not a transcendental signified nor a positive idea of a god or God

5.1.2 Différance “is” not negative theology
5.2 The possibilities of Derrida’s différence for postmetaphysical God-talk

5.2.1 Différence is grammatological and not mystical and the return or the haunting of negative theology

5.3 Negative Theology: How to avoid speaking

5.3.1 Plato

5.3.2 Christian

5.3.3 Heidegger

5.4 Beyond proper names, theology without theology, religion without religion, theology without God, yet saving the name God

6 In-conclusion

Chapter Five

The impossible possibilities of postmetaphysical God-talk. A conversation between Heidegger, Levinas and Derrida: Theopoetics and Holy Folly

1. Introduction

2. In summary: a conversation at the closure of Metaphysics

3. The first oblique offering: to be already in the text is to begin with an image, a sign, an inscription. Is there any other beginning?

4. The second oblique offering: The impossible possibility of Theopoetics as postmetaphysical God-talk

4.1 Theopoetics

4.2 Theopoetry and the danger of theopolitics

4.3 The temptations in the desert: the temptations in the name of God

4.3.1 The first temptation: the all-powerful author

4.3.2 The second temptation: conclusive meaning and thus certain knowledge

4.3.3 The third temptation: the power of order

4.3.4 Last temptation: Final judgment

4.4 Theopoetics between Theopoetry and Theopolitics and an exemplary narrative

5 The third oblique offering: The impossible possibility of holy folly as a possible postmetaphysical God-talk

5.1 Mōrosophia as the third way and alternative to both logos and mythos

5.1.1 Folly as the way to wisdom

5.1.2 Mōrosophia as the way in postmodernity at the closure of metaphysics
5.2 Byzantine Holy Fools and Erasmus’ In Praise of Folly 323

5.2.1 Salos on the margins of the early Christian asceticism of the desert monasteries 329

6 Theopoetics (mōrosophia) and Holy Folly (salos): a dance of the impossible possibility 336

7 At the closure of a study 337

Bibliography 339