The mutualism between plants and arbuscular mycorrhizal fungi is extremely widespread and ancient. This symbiotic relationship is an essential component of healthy ecosystem functioning and productivity, and is strongly involved in the cycle of two key elements: phosphorus and carbon. This thesis sheds new light on the evolutionary stability of mutualisms between plants and AM fungi and clarifies how these interactions shape ecological processes and evolutionary trajectories in natural and agricultural ecosystems.