TABLE OF CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS i

TABLE OF CONTENTS iii

INTRODUCTION 1

CHAPTER 1: THE BODY: AN INTERDISCIPLINARY PERSPECTIVE ON THE CORPOREAL TURN 11

1.1 Philosophy 14
1.1.1 African notions of Personhood 15
1.1.2 Philosophy in the flesh 17
1.1.3 Gendlin’s philosophy on a new mode of language beyond postmodernism 23
1.2 Sociology 27
1.3 Psychology 34
1.3.1 The emergence of somatic psychology 34
1.3.2 The boundaries of the body and touch 38
1.3.3 Embodied enquiry 41
1.3.3.1 Embodied understanding in qualitative research 45
1.3.3.2 Embodied understanding in psychotherapy 47
1.3.3.3 Embodied understanding in spirituality 49
1.3.3.4 The existential approach of Eugene Gendlin 52
1.4 The body in narrative therapy 55
1.4.1 The narrative metaphor 55
1.4.2 Insights as a narrative theologian/therapist 56
1.5 Paleoanthropology and anthropology 60
1.5.1 Paleoanthropology 60
1.5.2 Anthropology 65
1.6 Cognitive science and neurobiology 66
1.7 Towards a richer understanding of the body 75
1.8 The corporeal turn 79
CHAPTER 2: THE BODY AND LIVED EXPERIENCES IN SOUTHERN AFRICA

2.1 Background: a contemporary and complex narrative
2.1.1 The black body in the narratives of early travellers and missionaries
2.1.2 The bodies of black women in the pre-colonial, colonial and postcolonial period
2.1.3 The bodies of males in southern Africa
2.2 The body during apartheid and in apartheid theology
2.2.1 The depiction of the body during apartheid
2.2.2 The body in apartheid theology
2.3 The body in post-apartheid South Africa
2.4 An appeal to experience

CHAPTER 3: THE BODY IN CHRISTIANITY: THE CHURCH FATHERS TILL THE REFORMATION

3.1 Corporeal dynamics in early Christian communities
3.2 The body and the Church Fathers
3.2.1 Tertullian: look at the body
3.2.2 Clement of Alexandria: the body as consort and all
3.2.3 Origen: the dull creakings of the body
3.2.4 The Dessert Fathers and the body
3.2.5 Athanasius: man as body
3.2.6 Augustine: the inner man and his body
3.2.6.1 The body and soul
3.2.6.2 The resurrected “transhuman” body
3.2.6.3 The body and sexual desire
3.2.6.4 Augustine’s theory of time and embodiment
3.2.6.5 The bodies of martyrs
3.2.6.6 Augustine and female mysticism
3.3 The body during the Middle Ages
3.4 The body and the Reformation
3.5 Dualism, ambiguity or unity?
CHAPTER 4: THE BODY IN THEOLOGY: EXPLORING
THE CORPOREAL TURN

4.1 Background to the theological work of James B. Nelson
4.1.1 The body theology of James B. Nelson
4.1.2 Embodiment in Christian theology
4.1.3 On doing body theology
4.1.4 The reception of James B. Nelson’s body theology
4.2 A Roman Catholic theology of the body
4.2.1 Benedict M. Ashley’s theology of the body
4.2.2 The theology of the body of Pope John Paul II
4.2.3 The influence of Pope John Paul II’s theology of the body
4.3 Body theology versus a theology of the body
4.4 The corporeal turn in theology

CHAPTER 5: THE BODY IN THEOLOGICAL ANTHROPOLOGY

5.1 The landscape of contemporary theological anthropology
5.1.1 The religious naturalist anthropology of Wesley Wildman
5.1.2 Human uniqueness and personhood in the theological anthropology of Wentzel van Huyssteen
5.1.3 Nonreductive physicalism in the theological anthropology of Nancey Murphy
5.1.4 The relational theological anthropology of Fount LeRon Shults
5.1.5 The African christo-theological anthropology of Andrea Ng’wesheni
5.2. A brief overview of the theological anthropology of David Kelsey
5.2.1 Desiderata for a contemporary theological anthropology
5.2.2 The root question for his Christian theological anthropology
5.2.3 The proximate context
5.2.4 Eccentric human existence in the triune God
5.2.5 A Christological interpretation of imago Dei
5.2.6 Kelsey’s response to critics
5.3 The “body” in Part One. Created: Living on Borrowed Breath
5.3.1 Having been born as a living body
5.3.2 Being given a living body