ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

During the past five years Aceh has become a part of my life. I am deeply grateful to the people whose stories and experiences form the basis of this dissertation. Unfortunately, most cannot be mentioned by name. I can only hope that I have been able to thank them sufficiently in other ways. Darwis Soelaiman and Ibu Mariyana offered their hospitality during the first period of fieldwork in 2008. During this period, the researchers of the Pusat Kajian Pendidikan dan Masyarakat Aceh (PKPM), Pak Hasnul Arifin Melayu in particular, were incredibly helpful. Thanks also to Pak Erizar, Suraiya Kamaruzzaman, and Rika Rahayu for their valuable help at various moments in my fieldwork. Umi Rahimun and Azhar Muhtar were very generous with their time, and gave me an indispensable insight in their lives and in the gradual development of their school. Muhajir al-Fairusy has been a great help from the beginning of the project until the end. He taught me a lot about Aceh, and his observations and questions were a major source of insight and conversation. Nurdin (not his real name) introduced me to Aceh, stood ready for help ever since, and became a good friend. For some reason, my host family in ‘Juroung’ accepted me, without much ado, as a part of their everyday lives. This has been a crucial experience, for which I cannot thank them enough. I hope that I will be able to come back and visit many times in the future.

This research was supported by the Faculty of Arts, Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam. I would like to thank the faculty staff for creating great working conditions. Marco Last and Digna van der Woude provided parental care to the PhD community. Joris van Eijnatten, Diederik Oostdijk, and again Marco Last were supportive in providing the necessary funding for fieldwork. Jaap Fokkema has gone out of his way to produce beautiful maps. Fieldwork was facilitated by the institutional support of the Islamic State Institute IAIN Ar-Raniry in Banda Aceh. I would like to thank in particular Prof. Hasbi Amiruddin, Prof. Syahrizal Abbas, and Prof. Yusny Saby for their help during complex visa applications, and for giving me advice. Forth, I owe many thanks to the staff and researchers of the former Aceh Research Training Institute (ARTI) and the International Centre of Aceh and Indian Ocean Studies (ICAIOS). ARTI gave me a fellowship in 2009-2010 and, most importantly, an academic family. Leena Avonius, Harold Crouch, Saiful Mahdi, Ibu Melizar, Teuku Murdani, Eve Warburton, and Laura Yoder deserve special mention.

Writing this dissertation would have been much more difficult, if not impossible, without the knowledge, expertise and assistance offered by the staff of the Koninklijke Bibliotheek in Den Haag, the Nationaal Archief in Den Haag, the Arsip Nasional in Jakarta, the Arsip Daerah in Banda Aceh, and the library and special collections department of the Royal Netherlands Institute of Southeast Asian and Carribean Studies (KITLV) in Leiden.

I want to thank my colleagues at the VU. First of all, my fellow PhD’s, for the chats, coffees, gossip, beers, parties and complaints, and of course the inhabitants of the 12th floor. Susan Legene took me in as a foster child in her research group. A special word of thanks to the (other) members of the section History in Anthropological Pespective, Leo Douw, Amieke Bouma, and Frans Huijzendveld. Both as the head of the section and as a colleague, Pal Nyiri has been a source of great support.

I would like to express my gratitude to Gerd Baumann, Freek Colombijn, Petra van Dam, Irwan Abdullah, Jeroen de Kloet, Michael Laffan, Marcus Mietzner, and Kathryn Robinson for their useful suggestions during different stages of the research. Ward Berenschot and Suzanne Kroger provided me with a place to stay in Jakarta, and a chance for sharing experiences. The same goes for Dominic Berger, who somehow happens to already be there whenever I arrive: Penang, Aceh, Canberra, Jakarta. He has been a great friend. Sadiah Boonstra, Martin van Bruinessen, Robert Cribb, Daan Beekers, Greg Fealy, Michael Feener, Michele Ford, Gerry van Klinken, Michael Peletz, Matthias van Rossum, and Fenneke Sysling all read, and commented on, draft papers and/or parts of my dissertation. Finally, I have benefited a lot from the countless conversations with other researchers working in and on Aceh, notably Edward Aspinall, Dan Birchok, Joshua Gedacht, Reza Idris, Sehat Ihsan Shadiqin, Michael Feener, Nur Ichwan, Annemarie Samuels, Catherine Smith, and Eka Srimulyani.

A 2011 visiting fellowship at the Australian National University, awarded by the Australia-Netherlands Research Cooperation (ANRC), was inspiring. Edward Aspinall supported my application and warmly welcomed me at his department. The Islam Research Project, a cooperation of the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Leiden University, facilitated two fieldwork visits in 2012. Marise van Amersfoort, Martin van Bruinessen, Leon Buskens, Kees van Dijk, Nico Kaptein and all of my fellow researchers in Indonesia and the Netherlands are greatly acknowledged for their role in this project.

Many thanks to my paranimfen. Matthias van Rossum, coffee room and campus bar companion, always good for exciting ideas. Now we just need some time to work out at least some of these! Annemarie Samuels is an amazing source of creativity and encouragement. Her thorough reading of large quantities of draft dissertation helped me to improve it enormously.

I am deeply indebted to my supervisors, Heather Sutherland and Henk Schulte Nordholt. Henk has been pleasantly demanding, supportive, and fully committed, helping me to find my own way while making subtle adjustments when necessary. Heather has been an extraordinary teacher and supervisor for many years. She introduced me to the field, stimulated me, and encouraged me to discover, develop ideas, not to be satisfied too easily, and to keep on pushing my boundaries. I do realise how fortunate I have been, and I hope that there will be many more opportunities to learn from both of them in the future.

My family and friends are my basis. Thank you Esther, Bart, Maurik and Ikram, Tijmen and Simona, Jonatan, Bob, Els and Hans. My mother Joke visited me in Aceh and joined me briefly while doing fieldwork. What a special memory! Perhaps it takes a mother to be on the receiving end, without complaint, of some of the worst frustrations. Thank you, mom, for your continuous and wonderful support. It is now almost thirteen years since the death of my father, Peter. It makes me sad that he did not witness the process that led to this result. I imagine what a joy it would have been to talk about it, as father and son, and as scholars.

Dear Eliza, this project has been a challenge for both of us. You came to Indonesia with me to share in the experience, and you did it your own way, dealing with manuscripts and old men adorned with sarongs and krisses. Thank you for your quiet support, for putting things into perspective, for helping me to see what is important. The journey continues, for you, me and Vera, and I cannot wait!
