Table of Contents

Acknowledgements vii

Maps x

1. Inner Islam and the problem of Acehnese exceptionalism 1
   - Stating norms, claiming space 2
   - Islam, adat, and the ethnography of Aceh and Muslim Southeast Asia 7
   - Religious agency, authority, and the state: an interactive approach 14
   - Fieldwork and outline 22

2. From 'acting' to 'being': manifestations of religious agency, ca. 1600-1900 29
   - Versions of the past, visions of the future 30
   - The Hikayat Aceh: affirmation of a moral order 35
   - Responsibility and consequence as ethical categories in the eighteenth century 43
   - Ethical reflection in the nineteenth century war literature 50
   - Violence, colonialism, and the making of proper Muslims 59
   - Conclusion 61

3. Colonialism and the imagination of pious Aceh, ca.1890-1942 63
   - From military occupation to civil government 65
   - Good Islam, bad Islam 74
   - Religious practice in a place in flux 82
   - Islamic activism and state responses 87
   - Conclusion 99

   - Islam and the state in Acehnese society 102
   - The careers of Panglima Polem and Teungku Hasballah Indrapuri 105
   - Occupation, Revolution, Rebellion 109
   - Place, ritual, and the confluence of state and village: the Jayawardena notes 117
   - Conclusion 134

5. A crisis of solidarity: village, dayah, and the problem of moral authority 137
   - Fragmented authority and state practice: beyond the politics of violence and grief 139
   - A crisis of solidarity 144
   - The theft from the dayah 152
   - Village politics and the conceptualisation of traditional leadership roles 160
   - Conclusion 164

6. Just an ordinary person: scripturalism, morality and everyday life in a kampung tsunami 167
   - Islam and family life: routines and debates 169
   - Two stories, many concerns 173
   - Money, piety and perceptions of community 181