CONTENTS

1. General introduction 1
   1.1 Problem statement and purpose of the project 4
   1.2 Music in schools: historical context 4
   1.3 Theoretical framework 7
      1.3.1 Developmental Education 7
      1.3.2 Towards developmental music education 8
   1.4 Main concepts of the Cultural-Historical Activity Theory 9
      1.4.1 Meaningful learning 10
      1.4.2 Zone of proximal development 10
      1.4.3 Involvement/engagement 11
      1.4.4 Play 11
   1.5 Research questions and research design 12
      1.5.1 Study 1: The impact of music on child functioning 13
      1.5.2 Study 2: Playing music. A perspective on music education using the Cultural Historical Activity Theory of education 14
      1.5.3 Study 3: Music composition in the music curriculum 14
      1.5.4 Study 4: The effects of music composition as a classroom activity on engagement in music education and academic achievement. A quasi-experimental study 14
      1.5.5 Study 5: Noa, a 10-year-old composer. A case study 15
   1.6 Overview of the doctoral dissertation 15

References 16

2. The impact of music on child functioning 21
   Abstract 22
   2.1 Introduction 23
      2.1.1 Previous review studies 23
   2.2 Problem statement 25
   2.3 Research questions 25
   2.4 Purpose of the study 25
   2.5 Research methods 26
      2.5.1 Literature search 26
      2.5.2 Inclusion criteria 26
      2.5.3 Selected studies 27
      2.5.4 Independent variable: Intervention formats 27
   2.6 Results 28
      2.6.1 Cognitive functioning 28
         2.6.1.1 Academic performance 29
         2.6.1.2 Enhancement of cognitive task performance 32
         2.6.1.3 Music as facilitator of cognitive processes 35
      2.6.2 Social-emotional functioning 37
      2.6.3 Motor functioning 38
   2.7 Conclusions 38

References 41
3. Playing music. A perspective on music education using the Cultural-Historical Activity Theory of Learning and Development

   Abstract
   3.1 Introduction
   3.2 Highlights from the history of play studies
   3.3 Musical Play
   3.4 Towards an interpretation of (musical) play from an activity theory perspective
      3.4.1 Imaginative situation
      3.4.2 The activity format as a way to characterize play
         3.4.2.1 Rules
         3.4.2.2 Degrees of freedom
         3.4.2.3 Involvement
      3.4.3 The definition of musical play from a cultural-historical point of view
   3.5 Conclusions and discussion

References

4. Music composition in the music curriculum

   Abstract
   4.1 Introduction
   4.2 What is music composition?
   4.3 To what extent does music composition require the mastery of music notation and creativity?
      4.3.1 Music notation
      4.3.2 Creativity
   4.4 Towards a Cultural-Historical Activity Theory interpretation of music composition
   4.5 Music composition as a regular classroom practice – design of a teaching strategy
      4.5.1 A composition process in three steps
         4.5.1.1 Step 1 – Creation of a common base
         4.5.1.2 Step 2 – Creating ideas and writing the composition
         4.5.1.3 Step 3 – Presentation and publication or recording
   4.6 Conclusions

References
5. The effects of music composition as a classroom activity on engagement in music education and academic and music achievement: A quasi-experimental study

Abstract

5.1 Introduction

5.2 Theoretical basis and prior research on music composition as a classroom activity

5.2.1 Activity theory

5.2.2 Music education

5.2.3 The present study

5.3 Method

5.3.1 Design – procedure

5.3.2 Participants

5.3.3 Interventions

5.3.4 Research questions and hypotheses

5.3.5 Measures

5.4 Results

5.5 Conclusions and discussion

References

6. Noa, a 10 year old composer: A case study

Abstract

6.1 Introduction

6.2 Theoretical framework

6.2.1 Cultural-Historical Activity Theory

6.2.2 Music composition as playful activity

6.3 Methodology

6.3.1 Procedure design

6.3.2 Participant

6.3.3 Intervention

6.3.3.1 Learning objectives and content of the composition sessions

6.3.4 Data generation and analysis

6.4 Findings

6.4.1 Reflective descriptions on the music composition sessions

6.4.2 Questionnaire and outcomes of the semi-structured interviews

6.4.2.1 Music notations

6.4.2.2 Music listening

6.4.2.3 Music composition as activity

6.4.2.4 Model for music composition

6.5 Conclusions and recommendations

References
7. General conclusions and discussion

7.1 Introduction

7.2 Summary of the results

7.2.1 The impact of music on child functioning (study 1)

7.2.2 Playing music. A perspective on music education using the Cultural-Historical Activity Theory of learning and development (study 2)

7.2.3 Music composition in the music curriculum (study 3)

7.2.4 The effects of music composition as a classroom activity on engagement in music education and academic achievement: A quasi-experimental study (study 4)

7.2.5 Noa, a 10-year-old composer: A case study (study 5)

7.2.6 General conclusions

7.3 Limitations

7.4 Discussion: desiderata for the future

7.4.1 Teacher education

7.4.2 Assessment of creative processes

7.4.3 Benefits of the use of technology in music education

7.4.4 Music education in conjunction with other (arts) subjects

7.4.5 Music that should be taught in elementary schools

7.5 The child as composer

References

Appendices
Assessing musical functioning
Music listening
Audiation
Music making
Questionnaire
Music compositions by Noa Roumimper
Summary
Acknowledgements
Curriculum Vitae