TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION...1
I Preliminary remarks...1
II A brief introduction to Oyewumi and the reception of her work...1
III Sub-Saharan feminist scholarship: an outline...4
IV Sub-Saharan African feminism and sub-Saharan African feminist philosophy in context...8
V Oyewumi’s feminism as decolonising force...12
VI A note on the distinction between the empirical and the philosophical in the work of Oyewumi...15
VII Notes on terminology...16
VIII Summary of chapters...21

CHAPTER ONE: GENDER AND DIFFERENCE IN THE WORK OF OYEWUMI...24
I Introduction...24
II Some introductory remarks on the Nigerian and Yoruba contexts...25
III Oyewumi and the colonial invention of woman in Yoruba society...27
IV The relationship between Africa and the West in the work of Oyewumi...36
V Conclusion...43

CHAPTER TWO: OYEWUMI AND THE SUB-SAHARAN TRADITION OF RELATIONAL THOUGHT...45
I Introduction...45
II The relational and non-dichotomous construction of the subject and the world in sub-Saharan African philosophy...46
III The relational and non-dichotomous construction of the subject and the world in Oyewumi’s work...54
IV Implications of Oyewumi’s work for the sub-Saharan tradition of relational thought...64
V Conclusion...67

CHAPTER THREE: AFRICAN FEMINISM AS DECOLONISING FORCE...69
I Introduction...69
II Colonialism, coloniality and decolonisation...70
III Gender and colonisation in the Yoruba society...75
IV The relation between gender, race and colonialism...83
V Conclusion...87

CHAPTER FOUR: IRIGARAY AND OYEWUMI IN DIALOGUE ABOUT THE SACRIFICIAL METAPHYSICS OF THE WESTERN SYMBOLIC ORDER...89
I Introduction...89
II Irigaray’s diagnosis of the Western symbolic order...90
III How can this system be shifted?...96
IV Reading Irigaray alongside Oyewumi...98
V Critical reflections: race...101
VI Critical reflections: the subject...106
VII Critical reflections: gender duality and multiplicity...109
VIII Conclusion...112

CHAPTER FIVE: MOTHERHOOD...114
I Introduction...114
II De Beauvoir’s analysis of the problem of motherhood in the sacrificial economy of Western patriarchy...116
III Irigaray, motherhood and the undoing of the burial of the maternal feminine...119
IV Motherhood in precolonial Yoruba society...122
V Consequences for subjectivity...131
VI Motherhood as political, symbolic category exceeding biological reproduction...138
VII Decolonising power of motherhood...143
VIII Conclusion...145
CONCLUSION...147
I The dilemma of African feminism and African feminist thought...147
II Oyewumi and the colonial invention of women in Yoruba society...148
III Oyewumi and sub-Saharan African philosophy...149
IV Oyewumi and Irigaray...151
V The feminism of Oyewumi as decolonising force...153

SUMMARY...155

Bibliography...159