Contents

Acknowledgements

1. The opening statement
2. The approach
3. The rules
4. The mise-en-scène

Chapter 1 A BEGINNING

1. Tracing the noble steps: justifying trials by invoking auto-histories
2. Robert H. Jackson: invoking history in a legendary opening statement
   - The rootedness in history
   - The break with history
   - A turning point in history
3. The enactment of the future: the Special Court for Sierra Leone
   - Rootedness in history
   - The break with history
   - A turning point in history
4. A permanent International Criminal Court: the end of the auto-history?
   - Historical roots and self-improvement
   - From novelty to turning point
5. Conclusion

Chapter 2 HISTORY

1. Point of departure
2. Mapmakers and map readers
3. On your screen is a map
   - Ordering the local
   - Imagining the local
   - Appropriating the local
4. End point

Chapter 3 MAPS AND LANDSCAPES

1. The Court, the Victim and the Truth
2. The search for truth at the ICC: history and operationalization