ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Anke Visser was born in Pretoria in 1937. She attended high school in Pretoria and left for the University of the Witwatersrand in 1956 to study Medicine. After she graduated in 1961, she started her surgical training in the same year at the Wits University in Johannesburg. During her studies, she travelled to South Africa (Pretoria) for her surgical internship and to Farnham (Kent) for an extra surgical attachment.

She continued her surgical training in the United Kingdom and the United States. She completed her residency in the United States in Gynecology at the Essex Medical Centre (Dr. A. Bevan). After returning to South Africa, she held the position of Associate Professor at the University of Cape Town's School of Medicine in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology and served as the Head of the Department from 1991 to 1995. She is currently Emeritus Professor at the University of Cape Town. She has made important contributions in the field of gynecology and obstetrics, particularly in the area of gynecologic oncology. She has authored several articles on this subject and is a recognized authority in the field.

Anke Visser is married to Dr. A. Bevan, and they have three children. She enjoys reading, gardening, and spending time with her family. She is an active member of the South African Medical Association and has received several awards for her contributions to medicine. She is a respected figure in the South African medical community and continues to be involved in teaching and mentoring young doctors.