Table of contents

1. General introduction 11
   1.1 Introduction 12
   1.2 Empirical research on desistance 13
      1.2.1 Marriage, employment and desistance 13
      1.2.2 Women’s desistance from crime 14
   1.3 Theoretical framework 16
   1.4 Limitations of previous studies 19
      1.4.1 Social demographic context and penal climate 19
   1.5 The present study 21
      1.5.1 Sample and data 21
      1.5.2 Analytical approach 23
   1.6 Outline of the following chapters 23

2. Female desistance: A review of the literature 25
   2.1 Introduction 26
   2.2 Conceptualization and theories on desistance 27
   2.3 Method 28
      2.3.1 Sample of studies 28
   2.4 Results 34
      2.4.1 Family factors 34
      2.4.2 Social factors 38
      2.4.3 Individual factors 40
   2.5 Discussion and conclusions 42
3. Women's re-incarceration: The influence of marriage and children

3.1 Introduction
3.2 Theoretical background
3.3 Marriage, parenthood and female desistance
3.4 The post-release context
3.5 The present study
3.6 Method
  3.6.1 Sample
  3.6.2 Dependent variable
  3.6.3 Independent variables
  3.6.4 Analysis Technique
3.7 Results
  3.7.1 Descriptive statistics
  3.7.2 Multilevel logistic random effects models
3.8 Conclusion and Discussion

4. It's all about family? A qualitative examination of the influence of romantic relationships and motherhood on desistance

4.1 Introduction
4.2 Motherhood and romantic relationships in the post-release period
4.3 Methods
4.4 Results
  4.4.1 Romantic relationships
  4.4.2 Motherhood
  4.4.3 Full family package
4.5 Discussion
5. Outer forces or inner change? A mixed-method analysis of women’s pathways out of crime

5.1 Introduction
5.2 Theoretical overview
5.3 Method
  5.3.1 Sample
  5.3.2 Quantitative analyses
  5.3.3 Qualitative analyses
5.4 Results: quantitative data
  5.4.1 Descriptive statistics
  5.4.2 Hybrid random effects model
5.5 Results: qualitative data
  5.5.1 Descriptives
  5.5.2 Family life and employment
  5.5.3 Housing, drug use and financial difficulties
5.6 Discussion

6. General discussion
6.1 Introduction
6.2 Main findings
6.3 Discussion and theoretical implications
6.4 Implications for policy and practice
6.5 Limitations and agenda for future research