Table of contents

Chapter one. General introduction

1.1 Setting the scene: Developments in the Dutch home-care sector 13
1.2 Studying actors’ responses to challenges resulting from institutional complexity and change 22
1.3 Research methods 25
1.4 Research approach and rationale of the (evolved) research 29

Chapter two. Impact of home-care management on the involvement of informal caregivers by formal caregivers

Abstract 37
2.1 Introduction 39
2.2 Literature review 40
2.3 Methods 41
2.4 Findings 45
2.5 Discussion and conclusion 50

Chapter three. “We’re all Florence Nightingales”: Managers and nurses colluding in decoupling through contingent roles

Abstract 55
3.1 Introduction 57
3.2 Theoretical background 59
3.3 Methodology 62
3.4 Working in collusion and contingent roles in decoupling 67
3.5 Discussion 80

Chapter four. “That’s why we deliver care between the lines”: Nursing values, emotions and professional interests in micro-level decoupling practices

Abstract 87
4.1 Introduction 89
Chapter five. The institution reincarnated? Precariousness and predicament in reviving and re-habitualizing professional values, traits and practices

Abstract

5.1 Introduction

5.2 Latency, legacies and the potential of revival

5.3 No revival without decline: research setting

5.4 Methodology

5.5 Findings

5.6 Discussion

Chapter six. Conclusion and discussion

6.1 Summary of findings: Responses to institutional complexity and change

6.2 Theoretical contributions and implications

6.3 Reflections on methodology and focus

6.4 Practice implications

6.5 Concluding remarks

List of tables

List of figures

List of images

References

Summary

Acknowledgements / Dankwoord

About the author