Ecosystem services are the benefits humans obtain from nature. The sustainable supply of a diverse set of ecosystem services is threatened by land use change. Therefore, several policies have been developed to conserve and restore ecosystem services over time. To support these policies we present research on how to identify priority areas and actions to conserve and restore land for multiple ecosystem services.

Managing our land for multiple ecosystem services
Identifying priority areas and actions to maintain ecosystem services across Europe

Willem Verhagen